Their tea factory is located in the Gunnpural neighborhood of northeast Boulder. The company, established more than 40 years ago, has only one mission: to provide delicious, high-quality tea that is good for their customers and good for the world. Heavenly Spices is a world-famous tea factory, with free factory tours throughout the year. The tea shop tastes like tea they make, plus plenty of heavenly swag. On-site dining is available for breakfast and lunch at Celestial Café. Enjoy light and nutritious home-cooked meals. Natural Tea produced in Boulder: Help the whole world loosen up! A heavenly spice tea company in Boulder. The iconic sleepy tea bear had very modest beginnings. In 1969, a visionary group of knowledgeable entrepreneurs began incorporating natural herbs into a small Boulder barn. People from different people Mo Siegel, John Hay, Peggy Clot and a few others, started collecting herbs in the Boulder Mountains to make their first tea mix. It was also in the applying years that the herbal tea category was defined, when they started selling herbal teas in hand-stitched muslin bags. The company's name was inspired by one of its founders, Lucinda Zeing. All of their components originate in the forests and between the fields of the region. This soothing blend of hand-harvested chamomile, mint and lemon trees was sold in 1969 through local health food stores. It now boasts its own health line of eight different strains of sleep time. The idealistic founders of the Celestial Spices were determined to find success, but not at the expense of peaceful and harmonious coexistence with earth. Forty-five years later, the unique shared vision sustains one of North America's largest specialty tea producers, serving 1.6 billion cups of tea a year, made from more than 100 different ingredients in more than 35 countries. Factory tours on a tour of the Slates Drive factory. Photo: Wally Gobtz Heavenly Spices offers free 45-minute tours of factories operating hourly and includes a brief introduction of video and a 30-minute walking tour around the factory. Guided tours take you to the work factory, with several times a day. Tours are Monday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Every visitor gets the chance to see behind the scenes, everything from making tea to packing. Go on weekdays to watch the factory while the workers are busiest. If you catch it on a weekday, you'll see the plant in action, air conditioning, packaging and shipping products. Tours are every first morning and are served by guests with bookings required for each non-family group of 8 or more people. See how it all comes together, from fresh ingredients to finished wonder. Children 5 years and older are allowed to tour the factory. All ages are welcome in the tourist centre. All teas are available for tasting at the sampling bar, and visitors are always welcome to stop and try new blends without touring the facility. While at the property, guests can enjoy a meal and some great art at Celestial Café, open for breakfast and lunch from Monday to Friday. Other on-site attractions, such as their Mint Room, the multi-heaven garden and tea shop, are also open for daily tours. Located in the Gunbarrel neighborhood of East Boulder, the heavenly café offers doddy breakfast and lunch and many beautiful works of art. Special seasonings – popular products and heavenly coffee. The Red Singer ® and Sleepytime® were introduced in 1972 and are still among the bestsellers to date. These pioneering blends served as a major role in the company's near-nightly success. Today, Celestial Seasonings produces more than 100 types of tea, whose ingredients originate in 35 countries. Besides the U.S. and Canada, their tea is sold in many countries through their international distributors. Each tea is unique due to different herbal infusions and flowers. Carefully selected tea leaves originate from some of the world's best tea gardens in Rwanda, China and India. History of a heavenly sustainability company. The celestial twigs, fused for a purpose, are also returned to the community by helping various charities and organizations based in Colorado, as well as around the world. Corporate social responsibility remains the fundamental core of the celestial spice mission: doing business the right way by combining high-quality, sustainably produced products with responsible global citizenship. These ideals are evidence in the natural fibres, biodegradable, compost, and unchlorated tea bags that deliberately lack strings, tags, pins, and individual wrapper. Tea boxes use 100% recycled paper, including 35% post-consumer waste. The company's botanical buyers deal directly with farmers and communities that grow the products, enabling the highest quality ingredients while simultaneously providing economic benefits that remain within the communities. Many of the agricultural partners have provided heavenly spices for decades, acting in accordance with sustainable agricultural practices. The artist behind the art panda box drinks tea. Photography: F Delventhal We think our boxes are just as important as the good they hold, so we've always created a beautiful packaging decorated with thoughtful and inspiring works of art and words. If you've always wondered who to thank for the beautiful eye candy that's been included on the vibrant tea boxes all these years, much of the gratitude goes to artist Jerry Lofaro. From his ongoing relationship with heavenly spice tea, LoFaro created the images for over 50 boxes of tea, products, and bins. Now that the holiday is almost over for another year, put on the new slippers, curl up, and cheer your overworked nerves with Boulder's most beloved sleepy bear. Tea shop. Photo: Jaw Tea Boxes.
